SCRIPTURAL EDITORIALS.

Editor Shoemaker, of the Foot-hill Tidings, is becoming a very powerful factor in California politics, because of his strong logical capacity. We are inclined to believe that the secret of his success in combating errors, political and otherwise, lies in the fact that he quotes liberally from the Good Book to sustain his position. In all the range of Pacific Coast journalism, barring perhaps Frank Pixley, there is no one who searches the scriptures so exhaustively as old Ruf. Shoemaker. Here he has his opponents at a terrible disadvantage, because none of them know anything about scripture but Ruf., and he literally dances on their ignorance.

All his writings partake of the terse, homely scriptural diction, and there is a rich biblical flavor about his paper, that takes one back to the aromatic days of the old patriarchs.

Once he printed St. John's account of the trial and crucifixion of the Saviour, word for word, but by interspersing local sub-heads and display lines at the top, caused the unlettered populace of Grass Valley to think that it was his own account.

Ex-President Arthur, before his retirement from office, collated all the papers emanating from his hand during his term, and caused them to be reprinted and bound into a volume. He also carefully preserved all the correspondence relating to the demand for the removal of Collector Robertson, which Conkling made the price of his friendship. Arthur refused to pay this price, and Conkling therefor hated him nearly as much as he had hated Garfield. Some day the documents which Arthur treasures so carefully will be published, and then the true history of this famous negotiation, or intrigue, if that is a better name, will be given to the world.

The word "zareeba" occurs frequently in the Egyptian war news and few people have ever seen it before. A "zareeba" is an excavation made by the soldiers to protect themselves from the Arabs. Of course on the desert there are no stones or timbers to build forts with, hence the British are compelled to use sand. They throw up embankments of it on all four sides and encamp inside. Though not a first class fort, a zareeba beats nothing, and is used by the British to great advantage in their trouble with El Madhi.

An old newspaper publisher in New York State, 75 years of age, who had been abusing everybody in the village for some years, and was granted immunity from punishment by his years, was recently horse-whipped within an inch of his life by two women. He now realizes that although tottering on the brink of the grave he is not exactly safe from the cow-hide vet.

Lemons will keep good for months by simply putting them in to a jug of buttermilk, changing the buttermilk about every three weeks. When the lemons are required for use, they should be well dried with a cloth. It is also a good plan to keep the jar in a separate room from the whisky and sugar.

Mint Director Burchard has the confirming of all appointments made by Superintendents of the Mints and it is said that he will not sanction the removal of all of the employees of the Carson Mint, saying there is neither rhyme nor reason in displacing competent adjusters and other tried attaches.

United States Minister Morton and John W. Mackay have headed a subscription to a fund to be raised by Americans for a cast of a model of the statue, to be erected near the United States Embassy in Paris, the cost to be $20,000.

The other day a man applied to the manager of the Standard Theater for a job and was told to go and paint the Lotta Fountain red, for three dollars a day. The man took the joke for dead earnest and painted the fountain as ordered.
